CLASS COMMITTEE.

Class Secretary.

FRED WADSWORTH MOORE.

PREFACE.

The Secretary submits herewith his first report. He has aimed to make the report a complete history of the Class, in its connection with the University with a record of the meetings of the Class and of the deaths since graduation and a list of such marriages and births as have come to his notice. The second report will be issued before the end of the year and will contain the history of the members since graduation.

The Secretary wishes sincerely to apologize to the Class, and especially to those members who have replied promptly to notices, for the delay in the issue of the report. It should have been out within eighteen months or less after graduation. But the work of the Secretary as Graduate Manager of Athletics in addition to his regular Law School course and other work that he was obliged to undertake made it impossible for him to devote the time to or take the interest in the class work that a Class Secretary should.

Then, too, the fact that all the records of the class as kept during the college course were lost by the under-graduate secretary in shipping them added greatly to the permanent secretary's work, and will also account for some incompleteness in this report.

The Secretary hopes in the course of time to get Class Life blanks from those delinquents who have not refused point blank to fill them out and takes this opportunity to urge them for the twentieth time to attend to the matter in order to make the records complete.

And in connection with the second report, for which notices will be sent with this, the Secretary prays the members of the class to fill out the blanks immediately and return them. When the delay and neglect of one man is multiplied by two hundred or more it may readily be seen how the troubles of the Secretary increase, for he is obliged to write personal letters to each of the delinquents. If these men will consider for a moment what an undertaking it is for the Secretary to keep track of over four hundred men, very few of whom ever of their own accord send any information about themselves, they will perhaps realize how unfair it is unnecessarily to increase his burden.

FRED W. MOORE,
Secretary.

CLASS DINNERS.

March 3, 1892. Junior Dinner at the Revere House. One hundred and twenty-five men were present. The officers were: President, B. W. Trafford; Toast-master, J. A. Wilder; Orator, G. K. Bell; Poet, S. F. Batchelder. The following men responded to toasts "The Varsity Eleven," J. D. Upton; "The Varsity Nine," L. A. Frothingham; "The Varsity Crew," G. H. Kelton; "The H. A. A," C. R. Bardeen; "The Harvard Lampoon." J. H. Parker; "The Harvard Crimson," W. C. Nichols; "The Harvard Union," A. P. Stone; "The Future of Ninety Three," S. M. Brice; "Ninety Three in Music," F. S. Converse. The '93 Glee Club sang.

June 26, 1893. Commencement Dinner at the Vendome. Two hundred and thirty were present. F. W. Moore presided; J. A. Wilder was toast-master, A. P. Stone orator. The other speeches of the evening were extemporaneous. The Class Glee Club sang; and the Class gave all the old cheers.

June 25, 1895. Subscription Dinner at the Thorndike. Twenty six were present. G. K. Bell acted as toast-master. The speaking was extemporaneous and informal.

June 23, 1896. First Triennial Dinner at the Revere House. One hundred and forty were present. G. R. Fearing presided. G. K. Bell acted as toast-master. Speeches were made by L. A. Frothingham, the Hon. F. W. Dallinger and C. A. Blake. S. F. Batchelder read a poem and Robert Emmet gave a recitation.

Walter Cary, S. E. Marvin and F. S. Converse sang. The Class Cradle was presented by the chairman to Wm. O. Taylor for his son Moseley Taylor born Jan. 30, 1895. The "Cradle" is a silver cup with the College Seal in relief on one side and on the other the inscription :—

From the Class of 1893.
To its Class Baby,
Moseley Taylor,
Jan. 30, 1895.

Mr. Taylor responded and had the "Cradle" filled and sent round the table, all present drinking the Class Baby's health. At the suggestion of F. Roy Martin a telegram expressing the good wishes of the Class was sent to the crew at their quarters in Poughkeepsie. The Class appointed the toast-master a committee of one to pay their respects to the Class of 1855 who were dining in the next room. They sent in two members who made short speeches.— The toast-master gave some humorous imitations. The Class cheered '93, and Harvard, and sang "Fair Harvard."

THE CLASS FUND.

It has been very gratifying to see the way in which the different members of the Class have contributed to the Class Fund; those who have subscribed have, as a rule, subscribed liberally, and some members have since graduating increased their contributions. There are still some who, through inadvertence, have not made any subscription, and to these your Committee wish to emphasize the importance of contributing now rather than at some later time. It is on the income from the Fund that the Class has to depend for support, and a moment's reflection will show the necessity of putting the Fund in such shape that it will bear income at once. These considerations may also be addressed to the Class at large to illustrate the importance of paying up all subscriptions when the last instalment falls due.

As the Fund stands at present, it is not large enough to run the Class as the Class should be run. This is not wholly the fault of the members. That rain on Class Day was expensive. It cut down receipts and increased expenses to such an extent that instead of having a surplus of $1,500 or $2,000, as has been the case with some other classes, the Class Day Committee was only able to turn over to the Class Fund something under $400. This means a loss to the Fund of over $1,000.

Your Committee, then, makes three requests: (1) that those who have not yet subscribed will do so at once; (2) that those who feel that they can, will increase their subscriptions; and especially (3) that all subscriptions be paid, and paid promptly.

G. RICHMOND FEARING, Jr., Chairman,
CHARLES K. CUMMINGS,
HENRY WARE, Treasurer.

OBITUARY.

OBITUARY.

Philip Deland Stone died of consumption in Colorado Springs, Col., on August 22, 1890. He was born January 16, 1873, at Newton, Mass., where he lived until he entered college. He prepared at the Brown and Nichols School.

The "Crimson" of September 25, 1890, in its notice of his death, says: "He was a man of the most upright and simple character and of much ability and promise both in athletics and in his intellectual pursuits. There are few of his classmates who will not feel a personal share in this, their first loss; for his more intimate friends who knew the wonderful sweetness and dignity of his life, his untimely death is an irreparable misfortune."

The Class at a meeting held October 2, 1890, passed the following resolutions:

We, the Class of 1893 at Harvard College, having learned with sorrow of the death of one of our classmates, are

Resolved, That in the death of Philip Deland Stone we have lost one of our most promising members, whose manly nature, generous, true-hearted impulse and brave simplicity won all hearts; we recognize that in his death we have suffered an irreparable loss, and are

Resolved, That, as an expression of our sympathy, these resolutions be sent to his family.

Dated at Cambridge, October 2, 1890.

Charles Guy Martin died of consumption at his home in Cambridge, January 14, 1891. He was born February 2, 1870, at Chillicothe, Ohio, and prepared for college at the Lowell High School. He was a man of great promise, and had taken high rank in all his college work.

The "Crimson" of January 15, 1891, says of him: "In the short time granted him here he made many friends among his classmates, and in his death the Class loses one of its most promising members."

The Class at a special meeting held January 20, 1891, passed the following resolutions:

We, the Class of 1893 at Harvard College, having learned with sorrow of the death of one of our classmates, are

Resolved, That in the death of Charles Guy Martin we have lost one of our most promising members, whose manly nature, generous, true-hearted impulse and brave simplicity won all hearts; we recognize that in his death we have suffered an irreparable loss, and are

Resolved, That, as an expression of our sympathy, these resolutions be sent to his family.

Harold Munro Battelle died of consumption in Boston, June 3, 1892. He was born at Boston, May 8, 1870, and prepared for college at the Roxbury Latin School.

His health had been affected for more than a year before his death, and he was compelled to leave college in March. From then until his death he was confined to his room.

He was very prominent in both the athletic and social life of the University, and exceedingly popular with all who knew him. In 1890 he was coxswain of the Varsity crew, and the ensuing fall was coxswain of the '93 barge crew which won the fall races. In June he was coxswain of the victorious Varsity.

He was a member of the Institute of 1770, Δ. K. E., and Hasty Pudding Club.

The "Crimson" of June 4, 1892, says of him: "It was not what Battelle did so much as what he was to his friends and even mere acquaintances that makes his death such a blow to the college — his memory so tender. Battelle's nature was essentially lovable. Unusually kind and sympathetic, invariably courteous and considerate of others, generous in thought and action, keenly sensitive, and serene even in the midst of suffering which has been his lot for several years, — he was a thorough gentleman."

At a special meeting of the Class held June 6, 1892, it was voted to send the following letter to Mr. and Mrs. Battelle:

Massachusetts Hall,
Harvard University.

To Mr. and Mrs. Battelle: —

The members of the Class of '93 wish us to offer you their deep and heartfelt sympathy at the death of your eldest son. The whole college knew him and honored him as coxswain of the Varsity crew.

His quiet and unselfish nature soon won him the regard and admiration of all his classmates; and to us who have learned to love him Harold Battelle will always stand as a noble example of sincerity, fortitude, and hope.

David Hoadley was drowned at Lake Asquam, N. H., on September 7, 1892, by the capsizing of the canoe which he was sailing. He was born January 16, 1871 at Englewood, N. J., and prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy.

The "Crimson" of September 29, 1892, says of him: "He entered with great interest into all the duties and pleasures of college life. He was a good and faithful student and since his freshman year had been a member of the Varsity Glee Club. His death will be mourned by all who knew him. Of a kind and sympathetic nature, generous in every thought and action, true and constant in all his friendships, of the highest ideals and principles, he had gained the love and esteem of all who knew him."

(Some action on his death was taken by the Class but the Secretary has been unable to find any record of it.)

Wayne MacVeagh, Jr., died of heart disease at his home in Philadelphia January 1, 1893. Two unfortunate accidents, one, a fall from his horse while hunting; and the other the overturning of his carriage by an electric car, together with a severe attack of malaria undoubtedly hastened his death. It was, however, very sudden and unexpected and came as a great shock to his numerous friends in college. He was born at Westchester, Pa., June 6, 1869, his father being ex-Attorney General Wayne MacVeagh.

He entered college as a special and intended after finishing his course to study law in Philadelphia. He was very fond of base ball and cricket, and had played on the latter team since entering college and was captain of it at the time of his death. He also entered with great interest into the social life of the University and his frank sincerity and earnestness endeared him to all who knew him. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, Δ. K. E., Hasty Pudding, and Delta Phi.

The Class at a special meeting held January 5, 1893, adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas: God in his infinite wisdom has taken from us our classmate, Wayne MacVeagh, Jr.,

Be it resolved that we have lost in him not only a companion but a gentleman, scholar and friend whose loss will ever be felt as irreparable.

Be it further resolved that these resolutions be published in the Boston and college papers and a copy of them be sent to the parents of the deceased.

TRACY DOWS,
E. R. JONES,
Committee.

Oliver Whyte, Jr., died of pneumonia at his home in Medford on May 30, 1893. He had been ill only three days and the news of his death was a sad surprise to his friends. He was born at Medford, November 2, 1871 and prepared for college at the Medford High School. He was an excellent scholar and very popular with all who knew him well; always bright and cheerful, he was the life of the little circle of friends to whom he had most endeared himself. He was a member of the Pi Eta society, and sang on his freshman Glee Club and for a time on the Varsity.

The Class at a special meeting held June 1, 1893, adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas it has pleased God in his infinite wisdom to remove from us our classmate, Oliver Whyte, Jr., be it

Resolved that, while we bow with humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not the less mourn for him who has been taken from us.

Resolved, that in the death of Oliver Whyte, Jr., we have lost not only a companion, but also a gentleman, a genial friend, and an honored classmate.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the parents of the deceased.

Benjamin Hill Rounsaville died at Tamworth, N. H., June 20, 1894, after a long illness. He was born on a plantation near Camden, Arkansas, April 16, 1862 and was thus one of the oldest men in the class. Immediately after the close of the civil war he came north with his family to Covington, Ind. Both his parents died soon after. Until he was seventeen years old he attended school. From that age until he was twenty-five he was in the shoe business and later in the real estate and insurance business in La Fayette, Ind. He then determined to enter college and after two years of preparation was admitted to Harvard. During his college course he was much of the time in narrow circumstances and this together with the fact that he was so much older than most of his classmates prevented his becoming very well known in college. Those who were privileged to know him well thoroughly appreciated his true, warm hearted southern nature and admired the pluck and ambition he showed in undertaking so late in life to secure a college education.

After his graduation he continued in newspaper work, in which he had had considerable experience as correspondent during his college course.

Walter Clark Nichols died at Denver, Col., January 10, 1896. His death was probably due to heart disease. He was born at Pittsfield, Mass., December 21, 1870, but had lived most of his life in Buffalo, N. Y., where he prepared for college at the Buffalo High School and under a private tutor. He did his college work in three years but took his degree with the class. He was coxswain of his class crew for three years and was a member of the Signet and of the Institute of 1770. He was an editor of the Crimson and of the Lampoon, and wrote a great deal for outside papers, contributing to the Boston Herald, the New York Herald, the Sun, the World, and to Puck, Judge, Life and Harpers Publications.

After leaving college he devoted himself to journalism. He edited and published "Quips" in Buffalo for a year, and was on the New York Evening Post from October 1, 1893, to May 1, 1895. At the time of his death he was with Harper & Bros. who had sent him West for a special article.

His sad death cuts short a career that had already every prospect of success. He will be mourned by the Class as one of its brightest and most able members.

Edward Renshaw Jones died in New York, February 18, 1896, after a short illness with appendicitis. He had undergone an operation and appeared for a time convalescent but his malady soon renewed its hold on him and he passed away very suddenly. He was born in New York City June 24, 1871, and was there brought up. He prepared for college at St. Mark's School. A man of ability and character, and a true, open hearted friend, he was immediately popular with all who were fortunate enough to know him well. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, Δ. K. E., Zeta Psi, Hasty Pudding, Canoe Club, and Deutscher Verein.

After his graduation he entered the Columbia Law School from which he was nearly ready to graduate at the time of his death.

Richmond Stone died in Washington, D. C., March 27, 1896, after a very short illness with pneumonia. He was born at Elmira, N. Y., November 10, 1872, and prepared for college at Cheltenham Academy, and at the Berkeley School of New York. During his college course he made many friends. His nature was open, frank and sincere, and with his bright attractive manner made him immediately popular with all who knew him. His college life was well rounded out. He went into athletics, tried for his class teams in foot ball, rowing and running, and became very proficient in fencing and broad sword, winning the championship of the New England Division of the American Fencers League. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, Treasurer and President of the Harvard Rowing Club, Secretary and President of the Fencing Club and President and member of the Executive Committee of the Republican Club. He stood high as a scholar and received honorable mention in history with his degree.

After graduation he entered the law office of Carlisle and Johnson in Washington, also taking a course at the Law School of Columbian University. During the winter of 1895–96 he was abroad as special agent for the Agricultural Department but had returned to resume his law studies.

George Frederick Sibley died in Salem August 13, 1896, after a long illness. He had been confined to his bed since before his graduation, but passed away at the last very suddenly. He was born in Salem in 1871 and lived there all his life, preparing for college at the Salem High School. In his college work he was a hard student and took very high rank in his Sophomore year receiving deturs as second in the class and also second year honors in classics. In his Junior and Senior years he was ill a great deal and took his final examinations in bed after having been very ill for more than two months. Nevertheless he received his degree cum laude. it is not going too far to assume, had he had his health during the last half of his college course, that he would have stood among the first half dozen men of the class in scholarship.

Fred Howes Anderson died at his home in Wakefield, Mass., December 30, 1893. He had been ill since March with tuberculosis, but took his degree with the class. He was born at Arlington, Mass., August 28, 1869, but his family removed to Wakefield when he was but four years old. He prepared for college at the Wakefield High School, and passed his entrance examinations with credit. During his entire college course he lived at home, and for this reason and for financial reasons he did not enter much into the social life of the class. He devoted himself strictly to his college work, and stood high throughout his course, receiving second-year honors in classics, honorable mention in Greek, and taking his degree magna cum laude. He also won three scholarships during his course. He intended to become a teacher, and his college work had already proved his fitness for his chosen course.

Warwick Potter died at Brest, France, October 11, 1893. He was with Edgar Scott and party on the steam yacht Sagamore starting on a trip around the world. He had suffered greatly from seasickness for several days, which eventually caused an inflammation of the stomach, the immediate cause of his death. He was born in Framington, England, October 31, 1870, his father being Major-General Robert B. Potter, U. S. A. He came to America when two years old, and prepared for college at Groton. Of a very attractive and winning personality, he made many friends during his college course, and was a thoroughly representative Harvard gentleman. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, Δ. K. E., Hasty Pudding, Delta Phi, and other clubs.

His body was brought home to New York, where the funeral was held.

Howard Gardner Nichols died at Atlanta, Ga., June 23, 1896. He had been engaged since September, 1894, in superintending the creation of a model cotton manufacturing plant for the Dwight Manufacturing Company at Alabama City, Alabama. On May 20, while he was overseeing the placing of a heavy dynamo, a supporting platform gave way and the fall of the machine fatally injured him. He was born April 16, 1871, at Haverhill, Mass. His family later removed to Newton, and he prepared for college at the Boston Latin School. During his college course he took high rank in all his work, and, in a quiet, modest way, was very popular. He graduated "cum laude" with honorable mention in history and natural history.

After his graduation he devoted himself with great energy and remarkable ability to the mastery of the business of the manufacture of cotton, spending a year in the mills of the Great Falls Company and of the Dwight Manufacturing Company. In the fall of 1894 the latter company authorized him to inaugurate their undertaking at Alabama City, and gave him entire charge of it. He carried out the plans in the most masterly manner, and endeared himself to everyone with whom he came in contact. He was elected mayor of Alabama City, and at the time of his death had become known throughout the state as a man of the highest character and of exceptional ability. By his death Harvard loses one of her most promising sons.

Robert Tillinghast French died at Toronto, Canada, November 16, 1897. He had gone to Toronto from his home at Davenport, Ia., on a business trip, and was there taken with typhoid fever. He was thought to be out of danger, but a relapse came on and he died very suddenly.

He was born at Davenport, Ia., July 3, 1871, and prepared for college at Phillips Andover. In his college course he was prominent in the literary life of the class, being an editor of the "Advocate" and a member of the Signet and O. K. societies. Though never a man of strong physique, he went into athletics with great pluck and perseverance, trying for the class crew and football team. Especially in boxing, of which he was very fond, he showed what enthusiasm and "sand" could accomplish, winning numerous prizes against stronger and equally skillful men. And he carried this same spirit into his life work. He learned the practical side of steel manufacture by working side by side with the day laborer, rising at six o'clock every morning and laboring ten hours a day, preferring to work his way by sheer force of merit to a position of responsibility rather than take the short cut that his influence and connection opened to him.

But it is as a simple-hearted, pure-minded gentleman that Bob French is remembered by those of us who knew him well in college, a man of the highest character and principles, a man admired by all who knew him, and mourned by many as a true and faithful friend.
